BETWEEN MARKET AND JEFFFES ..FEB. 15, 1857. WEDNESDAY ...

IT The New York papers are discussing the important fact of increased expenditures for their public schools, without a corresponding increase in the number of pupils or accommodations for schools. The average for each scholar in 1855, was $11 50; for 1856, $13 11. The h general opinion is, that there is something wrong, but we presume if the increased price of the means of living is considered, this increased co t will not be unaccountable. Thirteen dollars and eleven cents per scholar per annum is cheap enough. Good private schools cannot be conducted at such a price; and although greater economy may be secured by systematic general efforts for public education, it cannot be expected that a difference of four or five fold can be maintained, unless at the expense of the character of the public schools.

The expense of public education in New York city in 1855, was $540,495 12; in 1856, f rt $5*4,940 07. The average attendance the former year, 45,457; the latter, 45,596. He is determined now to have three more free States within a year, Kansas, Minnesota, and Oregon. He has concluded that there is no remedy for all this; and, if so, the question arises, why has he been railing about it for so long a time? It seems by his own con fession, that he has been in spasms over an im practicability. Finally, however, we are glad to see that the editor hopes for the best, and flatters himself that the country is not ruined

Now, why does not the organ let the slavery question alone? He and some of his fraternity are forever harping on it, but have nothing practical to offer about it. The Democratic party have settled the question in the only practicable and honorable way; and it is now admitted that it cannot be altered. No higher indorsement of the practical wisdom of the settlement could be made. The factions feel sad to think that the territorial question, so far as slavery is concerned, is no longer available for party agitation. be beaten. A servant girl, the principal witness, swore that he came kitchen while the kettle containing the water BROCHE, PLAID, AND STELLA for the tea was on the fire, and sent her out on some frivolous pretext; when she returned she noticed that the water in the tea kettle present ed a strange, foamy appearance, but paid no attentiou to this, however, but made the tea from this kettle as usual, and did not think of 100,000 100,056 | it again until the subsequent fatal occurrence brought it fearfully to her remembrance. It was also proved that Summons, the pris-oner, absented himself from supper that even-At that time the cholera was raging here as an epidemic, and when Summons returned in the evening, and was told of the illness of his people, he declared that they were all attacked with the prevailing disease. This was the substance of the evidence. The result was the conviction of Summons

An appeal was taken to a higher court, and a new trial was granted. Subsequently Summons was admitted to bail. When his second trial took place it was discovered that the main witness—the servant girl alluded to above—could not be found, and it was alleged that she had died of cholera. A witness was produced who had taken notes of her testimony, and, though serious objections were made by the counsel for the defense, his testimony was admitted. Again Summous was convicted, and he was sentenced to be liung. An appeal was again taken, on the ground that the prisoner, during this trial, had not had the privilege, guaranteed by the Con stitution to all persons charged with erime, of being brought bee to face with the witnesses against him, as the testimony of the servant girl as given on the first trial was admitted on he second, though this witness had died before the last took place. This appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, by which tribunal it has been considered on two occasions. On the first of these, one of the judges declined giving an opinion, and the other four were equally divided for and against the prisoner, so that no decis was rendered. The ease was again brought be fore the court during its present session at Columbus, and a decision was finally rendered on Saturday last, confirming the sentence of the lower court, and fixing the time for the execuion on the 14th of April next.

In regard to this decision, we believe that here is but one opinion entertained by the public, and that is, that it is a just one. That Summons is guilty of this awful crime, no one who has read the testimony can for a moment donht. But as to the expediency into effect the dread penalty of the law in thi-case, there is a great diversity of popular senti ment. In view of the long and paintil confinement of the prisoner, and his present mental family, there is a strong, we may may predonsmant, feeling among our citizens in favor of a ominutation of the sentence to imprisoument with the Governor to permit the law to take itcourse, or to pursue the more merciful alterna munting the sentence.
